PIFKO: Q. Part of the reason that you have that threshold is so that you won't interrupt the customer's business. Correct? A. It's the so the threshold has been so the threshold was in place before we blocked orders. So the threshold was always 3 percent, even when we weren't stopping orders. So for the first 17 years, when the agreed-upon practice with DEA was that you reported suspicious after and we wanted you to report anything over 300 three times the average of that category, that was how it was done. There was no impact to the customer, because it was reported after the fact. So the threshold trigger has nothing to do with the impact of the on the customer. That's always been the trigger, regardless of whether we stopped orders or

1 A. Was I upset? No, I wasn't upset.

² I mean, I think the commentary -- you know, ³ mentioning pill mills, that there is -- that this

4 is a -- you know, these pills mills were popping

5 up. They weren't popping up. DEA was licensing every one of these pill mills.

So here's the head of the DEA --

8 former DEA person blaming it on the pop up of the pill mills that his department licensed that 10 enabled that to occur. And so, yeah, I get 11 frustrated, because we do what we're supposed to do in the supply chain, and we're not an 13 enforcement agency, and the enforcement agency is

14 trying to blame it on the regulated wholesalers when they're the ones who license these

¹⁶ pharmacies, they license these doctors, they

17 review all the information, they know every pill

18 that's sold. They have full enforcement

19 discretion. They can go into pharmacies, they ²⁰ can raid pharmacies, they can go into doctors.

21 But instead, they're focusing on distributors

22 that have no line of sight to that, and then make

23 it sound that we're just selling to people that ²⁴ aren't licensed, which is completely out of line.

They have all the distribution. They know how many pills are going to each pharmacy. They know how many pills are going to what areas. They have full -- they have all that information.

Part of our deal in 2007 was to report every single controlled substance sale every day to DEA, which we did. Full transparency. And that discussion was in the event that we do find -- you know, we know this is a new program and a new area, so we want you to report every order. And if we see something suspicious, we'll call you. And then we'll tweak it some more.

We never received a call. We never received any other issues. And now we have him on 60 Minutes saying that we're servicing all these -- you know, the distributors are servicing these pill mills, it's just -- again, I think there's a lot of blame to go around, but I can tell you that if a doctor didn't write the prescription, then we wouldn't

We only sell to DEA licensed pharmacies and hospitals. And we take our ³ responsibilities very seriously. So when I see a

⁴ guy on 60 Minutes who -- we negotiated our deal

⁵ with Joe Rannazzisi. He negotiated our program

6 and existence from 2007 forward. And here he is

⁷ making all these claims. He was in the room across the table from me. He agreed on everything that we put in place. Everything.

And then to have a 60 Minutes article come out and kind of lambast what he worked with us and negotiate is, yes, 13 frustrating. Yeah.

So you feel that the DEA had responsibility for the opioid crisis?

MR. NICHOLAS: Object to the form.

THE WITNESS: I'm not -- again, the opioid crisis is a huge -- I mean, there's a -- you know, there's a lot of areas that assumes that opioid crisis. Does DEA, they set the quotas. They

> MR. NICHOLAS: Object to the form.

THE WITNESS: Again, these are just notes I was writing as he was -as -- during the 60 Minutes. And he's, you know, discussing the problem with opioids. And he was in full control of the DEA during that entire time.

Did he ever introduce legislation or propose rules? He was in charge. Why didn't he put proposed rules to further regulate controlled substance distribution? Why didn't he create a special license for pain management so we
